OUR Dahlia Garden at the Wembley Exhibition in 1924 and 1925 was visited by people from all parts of the World, including Members of our own Royal Family, and was considered to be one of the most pleasing exhibits in the Horticultural Section, despite the fact that the year 1924 was a very trying season (owing to the excessive rainfall and lack of sunshine) for all forms of bedding plants. The Dahlia, however, bravely withstood such conditions, and wherever it was planted made striking displays, amply demonstrating its usefulness as a plant which may be relied on under severe weather conditions and as a plant which can be had in flower over a longer period of time (from July until October, or until cut down by frost) than any other flowering plant we know of.

The very striking beds of Dahlias in the London and other Parks is a proof of their increasing popularity, and when used for massed effects they can be planted much closer than is usually recommended for Dahlias, viz., two feet apart. When we receive a complaint as to failure, it is usually due to want of care in selecting suitable varieties or neglect of proper staking. We always impress upon intending growers to use a strong stake (however rough) at the time of planting, and later adding four more stakes about nine inches from the base of the plant, inclining them outwards. Your plant will be amply secured by using any soft cord or untwisted old rope, commencing about a foot from the ground and adding ties as the plant increases in size. Let your stakes be of one height and well pushed into the soil, keeping them about one foot below the height that your plant will attain (consult your catalogue as to heights). Untidy staking detracts from the beauty of any plant. It is necessary to use vigilance before and after planting. Presuming your ground has been prepared, give it a good dressing of fresh slaked lime early in the morning or late in the evening before planting. When planting it is most necessary to see that the soil (which should be nice and fine) is properly filled in around the neck of the plant (the spot where slugs generally harbour), and a little extra vigilance bestowed on them for a few weeks (as it is in the young stage when slugs do most damage to the tender stem). After a few weeks' care, it hardens and is not so liable to attack. A dusting of fresh lime or soot will be most helpful. If warm, dry weather, give them a slight sprinkle each evening. Earwigs are trying; they can, however, be trapped by leaving about the surface of the ground, or tied to a stake, any dry receptacle—match boxes, ends of bamboo canes—into which they can crawl. Examine these daily.

Dahlias are never satisfactory if planted under trees or dense foliage. To those who have no means of sheltering their plants, do not have them before you are ready to put them in their proper positions, say from the middle of May onwards.

Rail charges, particularly for long distances are fairly heavy. We, however, strongly advise clients to have the plants in pots, as they do so much better and establish themselves right away when planted out.

When plants are sent rooted, shaken out of pots, they are bound to receive a slight check. In addition, pots and soil must be purchased (which is an additional cost). Plants sent in this manner take a few weeks to recover, and unless had early in the season are consequently later coming into flower. Those, however, who desire to have them sent by post, out of pots, should add 1/6 for a dozen plants or 2/6 for 24.

Those who have a cold green-house or frames, have your plants earlier and pot them into 5 in. or 6 in. pots, keep them close for a few days; when nicely rooted through, give plenty of air.

All our plants are properly hardened in cold frames before being sent out.

We suggest to any client who may not be acquainted with the several sections to leave the selection to us, stating clearly whether required for exhibition purposes or for garden decoration. To those who are acquainted with the Dahlia, a perusal of our catalogue will confirm their knowledge that only the finest varieties are sent out. Our experience with these plants for over half a century enables us to supply varieties that will please. Nothing is sent out but what has been tested in our Nurseries.

Great care is exercised in giving the height of each variety. This, however, is influenced by the weather. If the season is a very hot and sunny one, the height is somewhat increased.

SPECIAL NOTE.—Colonial and Foreign orders are not executed until a remittance is received. It would materially assist if all necessary permits are included at the time of ordering.
